

Hailing from the City of Oxnard, Daniel Chávez, Jr. has dedicated nearly a decade to championing communities throughout Ventura County. Since 2015, he's been a vocal advocate for the residents of Oxnard, tirelessly working to address their needs and concerns. In 2019, Daniel took on the role of serving on the Oxnard Planning Commission, and his commitment to public service continued to grow. In 2021, he received further recognition for his dedication by being appointed to key positions, including the Ventura County Transportation Commission, Metrolink, and the Ventura County Emergency Climate Council.